SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. F. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR JUNE 20

THE LORD OUR SHEPHERD.

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 23. GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want.—Ps. 23:1. DEVOTIONAL READING—Ezek. 34:11-16.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—John 10:1-18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God takes care of us.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Shepherd Psalm. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Trusting God for Everything. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Our Divine Shepherd.

This is a lesson so simple that a child of tender years can understand. The teacher's work will be mainly to point out the riches of its content, not to explain difficulties. The position of the Psalm determines its value. It is preceded by the Psalm of the Cross. Only those who are under the power of the cross can claim its promises. There are no green pastures to those who have not seen Christ on the cross.

The relationship of the Lord to his children is set forth in this Psalm as:

I. The Divine Shepherd (vv. 1-4). The teacher should thoroughly familiarize himself with the life and service of a shepherd. As our shepherd,

1. He feeds his sheep (vv. 1, 2). The "green pastures" are for nourishment. The Lord always provides food for his own sheep, both temporal and spiritual. He gives us our daily bread, but our highest and best food is Christ, the Bread sent down from heaven for our souls (John 6:58), of which if we eat we shall live forever.

2. He gives rest (v. 2). He not only gives food, but he maketh his sheep to lie down. When the sheep have been satisfied with food they lie down to rest. Our finite natures require rest—we cannot go on forever, so the Divine Shepherd has arranged resting places on the way, two of which are night and the Sabbath. How sweet they both are to the Child of God! Sometimes he makes us to take enforced rest. It is most comforting to know that when he makes us lie down it is in the green pastures, not on the dusty road or the rocky mountain side. Our shepherd sometimes leads us over steep and rocky roads, but this is in order that we may reach the spots of green pasture.

3. He keeps the sheep in safety (v. 3). He restores our souls. The rest by the still water results in the restoration of bodily and spiritual strength. In the times of quiet he restores the spiritual life by the feeding upon God through his Word and means of grace. The restored soul is led into the paths of righteousness, that is, in the performance of labor for him. We have been saved not merely for our pleasure, but that we might do his good pleasure, that is, his work. We are saved to serve.

4. He guides the sheep in times of danger (v. 4). He goes with his own through danger and trials. There is no night so dark or sea so stormy but what we can hear the voice of the Divine Shepherd saying, "Be not afraid, it is I." May we have ears to hear!

5. He comforts his sheep in sorrow (v. 4). The rod was used by the shepherd to count his sheep. Passing under the shepherd's rod was the sign of ownership. Such acknowledgment would greatly comfort, even though the rod was the instrument which caused the sorrow. The consciousness that it was laid on by the loving shepherd's hand would turn the rod which smote to a staff to lean upon.

II. The Divine Host (vv. 5, 6). 1. He spreads a table in the sight of our enemies (v. 5). Though dangers are on every hand, the enemies plotting and scheming, the mighty shepherd provides a feast for his own in their sight. We can sit down to that feast with the assurance that no one can disturb us.

2. He anoints our heads with oil (v. 5). Oil is a symbol of joy. There could be no sad faces among Christ's own.

3. Goodness and mercy perpetually follow (v. 6). These are God's two angels which encamp round about those that fear him. They hold back the enemies from overtaking us; we can feast at God's banquet table. Even when the days seem dark and sorrows come thick and fast, God's goodness and mercy still follow.

4. Eternally dwelling with God (v. 6). They shall no more go out from his presence. He who hath begun a good work in us shall complete it unto the day of redemption. May every one take this Psalm for himself and make Christ his own personal shepherd!

Three Orders of Beings.

We have among mankind in general three orders of beings; the lowest, sordid and selfish, which neither sees nor feels. The second, noble and sympathetic, but which sees and feels without concluding and acting. The third and highest, which loses sight in resolution and feeling in work. For one who is blinded to the work of God by profound abstraction or lofty purpose, tens of thousands have their eyes sealed by vulgar selfishness, and their intelligence crushed by impious carelessness.—Ruskin.

The Whole Secret of A Better Tire

Simply a Matter of the Maker's Policies

This you will realize—once you try a Brunswick—that a super-tire is possible only when the name certifies that the maker is following the highest standards.

For fire making is chiefly a matter of standards and policies—cost plus care. Any maker can build a good tire if he cares to pay perfection's price.

All men know Brunswick standards, for Brunswick products have been famous for 74 years.

Formulas, fabrics and standards vary vastly in cost. Reinforcements, plies and thickness are a matter of expense. And these variations affect endurance. It rests with the maker how far he wishes to go—how much he can afford to give.

For there are no secrets nor patents to hold one back.

To ascertain what each maker offers one must analyze and test some 200 tires—as our laboratories have done.

Then it is a matter of combining the best features and building according to the highest standards.

Once you try a Brunswick you will understand how we have built model tires, regardless of factory expense.

Yet Brunswick Tires cost you the same as other like-type tires. Our saving is on selling cost, through our nation-wide organization.

We realize that you expect more from Brunswicks, and we assure you that you get it. ONE Brunswick will tell you the story.

And then you'll want ALL Brunswicks. No other tire, you'll agree, gives so much for your money.

HELPFUL WORDS FROM A BEDFORD CITIZEN

Is your back lame and painful? Does it ache especially after exertion?

Is there a soreness in the kidney region?

These symptoms suggest weak kidneys.

If so there is danger in delay.

Weak kidneys get weaker fast.

Give your trouble prompt attention.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Your neighbors use and recommend them. Ask your neighbor.

Read this Bedford testimony.

Miss Mary F. Wise, 147 Spring St. says: "I suffered greatly from backaches and distressing pains through my kidneys. I couldn't stoop or lift anything without great pain and I also had severe headaches and dizzy spells. Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Heckerman's Drug Store removed the backaches and pains in my kidneys and the headaches and dizzy spells left. The action of my kidneys also became regulated. I am pleased to have you use my recommendation for Doan's Kidney Pills at any time you wish.

What a lot of argument there used to be about a woman driving an automobile

TODAY she can "make a train" or fix a tire as well as anybody.

As soon as a luxury becomes a necessity the point of view changes.

II

Two or three years ago you would have listened to more varying opinions about tires than you could shake a stick at. Mileages, construction, treads and whatnot.

It's different now. Tire users are working towards a unanimous feeling.

You express it one way—the man down the street another. But sifted down it amounts to this:

That the only way to settle your tire problem is to get a tire of known value and stick to it.

III

We recommend and sell U. S. Tires because their value is known.

There's no guess about it.

It was the U. S. quality policy which led to the perfection of the straight-side automobile tire, the pneumatic truck tire—two of the greatest additions to tire value that have ever been made.

As representatives of the oldest and largest rubber concern in the world, we are in a position to tell you something about tire values. Come in some day and talk to us.

Select your tires according to the roads they have to travel:

LEASES FAIR GROUNDS FOR EMPLOYEES

COMPANY FURNISHES AMUSEMENT FOR 15,000

Leasing a county fair ground in order to give its 15,000 employees adequate recreation facilities is the latest move of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. manufacturers of Prince Albert tobacco and Camel cigarettes, in promoting the welfare of its workers.

With the space made available in this way, six baseball nines are able to play at the same time without interfering with each other. Three regulation diamonds have been laid out in the oval made by a half-mile track. A grandstand makes it possible for thousands of the company's employees to witness the game.

The company's playground league includes 16 teams of 12 players each, representing all departments. Each squad was equipped from cap to spikes with best quality uniforms and all accessories at the company's expense. In all, 192 complete outfits were provided, which is said to make the largest order for baseball uniforms ever placed by a single manufacturing concern for its employees.

The county fair grounds also provides space for basketball, volleyball and track sports in which women employees, as well as men engage. Great enthusiasm and rivalry have developed as a result of the improved recreational facilities and the baseball league opener was a gala occasion, featured by a parade of thousands of Reynolds workers in carnival attire.

FARMING FOLLOWS THEM.

Even in the financial centers of the United States—Wall street, for example—agriculture is being recognized as America's basic industry. One of the big trust companies has issued a booklet emphasizing this fact. Not only are industries which we commonly regard as agricultural dependent on farming as a basis, but many industries which most of us conceive as foreign to this field are in reality agricultural at bottom. As a matter of fact, between 80 and 85 per cent of the manufactures of the United States are dependent on the farm for their raw material. With agriculture thus recognized as of fundamental importance, every improvement, every step forward in farming is of national significance, says Kansas Industrialist. Farming must not decline, it must increase and grow more efficient, if the national prosperity is to be maintained. No agencies perform greater service in keeping farming going forward than do the federal and state experiment stations. For all progress there must be leaders. In farming the experiment stations are the leaders. They mark out the paths. They do the experimenting, the testing, which no individual could do. They determine what plans and processes will be of practical value and what will not. Successful farming follows them.

So many people fool themselves into believing that they can have more and do less. It is a temptation to make easy money the occasion for an easy time. Thousands have tried it only to find that easy money does not last and easy times are enjoyed at the expense of future prospects. An easily earned dollar, it may be said, is worth as much as a hard-earned dollar. True, they will buy the same things, but this is not the only test. The man who makes it easily usually spends it easily, and the man who gets it by hard work uses it to the best advantage, says Milwaukee Journal. He makes his dollar produce. A part of it produces for his present, a part of it for his future needs. So the worth of money lies in what is done with it, and indirectly in what the earner puts into the making of it. Money can be made an asset or a liability. Whether the dollar stays at 50 cents or goes up to par depends largely upon people. A full dollar is the unit of full production.

Recently the United States department of agriculture received an unusual request. It came from a school teacher in Fremont county, Wyoming, and asked for photographs of the different breeds and types of horses, cattle, poultry, hogs and sheep. "The display of such pictures on school-room walls," wrote the teacher, "will do much, it is believed, to encourage the keeping and breeding of well-bred stock in the locality." Well-bred stock means a prosperous community and more foodstuffs for all. Fremont is to be congratulated on having a teacher who recognizes this fact. She isn't at all like the teacher who scolded Mary for letting that juvenile mutton follow her to school. The lamb now is invited. But it must be a well-bred lamb.

A court in Ohio sentenced a cruel husband to be beaten with the same belt and buckle with which he had flogged his wife. Now the sentimentalists will be indignantly accusing the court of destroying the wife-beater's inherent manhood by such a brutal punishment. But it is safe to say he will never come before that court on the same charge again, says Baltimore American. And that is one of the great ends for which law and courts were instituted.

Proof has been found that red hair for girls is a very ancient invention. Two skeletons have been found in a prehistoric stone house in New Mexico of a boy and girl who were overwhelmed by a volcanic eruption. The girl had red hair. This antedates Cleopatra and all other historical rumps.

Just as it became evident that there would be an enormous rush of American tourists to Europe during the coming season the steamship companies discovered that it would be necessary to advance their rates. There is always somebody to take the joy out of life.

CLARION CALL TO HI

More than 5000 signatures were obtained to a petition circulated in Oregon today, asking United States Senators Hiram W. Johnson to repudiate the platform adopted by the Republican National Convention in Chicago and to announce himself as an independent candidate for the Presidency, according to a telegram sent today to Senator Johnson by W. P. Adams, Portland, Attorney.

Adams said, "so we started them in sent any Johnson organization that heretofore existed, but that his telegram was sent in behalf of many supporters of Johnson in the recent Oregon primary election.

"We heard that similar petitions were being circulated in New York," Adams said, "so we started them in Portland today. So far the petitions have been circulated only in Portland but we plan to send them throughout the State."

Adams said that he, and the group with which he is connected, will continue to circulate the petitions until Johnson declares positively that he will not be a candidate for the presidency on an independent ticket.

Johnson Keeps Under Cover
Notification that 5000 persons in Oregon had signed a petition asking Senator Johnson, of California to repudiate the Republican platform and make an independent contest for the presidency, as contained in a telegram sent by W. P. Adams, a Portland attorney, had not reached the Senator's office when it closed for the day. Johnson, who returned from Chicago last night, did not appear at the capitol today and at his office it was said he was resting at his home at Riverdale, Md.

Ouch! Such Pain!

It takes you right in the back! Sometimes in the hip, or foot.

It's all due to an over-abundance of that poison, called uric acid. The kidneys are not able to get rid of it. Such conditions you can readily overcome, and prolong life by taking the advice of Doctor Pierce, which is, "keep the kidneys in good order." Avoid too much meat, alcohol or tea. Drink plenty of pure water, preferably hot water, before meals, and drive the uric acid out of the system by taking 'Anuric.' This can be obtained at any drug store, in tablet form.

NESCOPECK, PA.—"In regard to the use of Doctor Pierce's Anuric, would say, that I have never taken any medicine that helped me more. I had been troubled with kidney trouble and lame back so that I could not walk straight, and was not feeling able to do anything, but after taking the 'Anuric Tablets' I feel like a new man. I am 67 years old and have worked all summer, and give 'Anuric' the credit for it. I would say to all that have kidney trouble, try 'Anuric.'"—JACOB GOOD.

MOTOR FEEDERS ON RIVERS.

The plan to operate systems of autotruck lines in connection with the steamboat service on the Columbia and Willamette rivers in the northwest section of the United States opens up interesting possibilities as to what may be done in thus combining land and river transportation systems in other parts of the world. The establishment of auto-bus lines as feeders to railroad systems has resulted in great benefit to both railroads and rural populations, but up to the present time auto lines as feeders for the river steamboat routes have not been put into operation. In fact the lack of such tributary streams of traffic in the case of river lines is regarded as one of the causes for the gradual decline of river commerce in its competition with railroad service, in different parts of the world. It is regarded as possible, therefore, that with the extension of such auto lines towns on navigable streams, that were once flourishing but which are now somnolent, will be revived through the refreshing currents of commercial life, says Christian Science Monitor. It is pointed out that with the development of a more efficient motorboat service than has been realized in recent years, even small streams may thus lend themselves to the promotion of quickened commercial and social intercourse.

"During the 19 months America was at war, while the Germans were killing 50,151 American soldiers in France, there were 126,654 civilians killed in this country, workers in our industries, men and women on our streets, children in our homes—an average of 220 per day." This statement by the safety superintendent of the Santa Fe is an example of the "punch" which we consider necessary to rouse the American people to a real enough evil, says New York Post. The speaker did not think it worth while to compare the number of Americans who were exposed to the German fire with the number at home. But while the trained mathematician might object, public indifference to the ordinary hazards of peace needs a stirring up. The Santa Fe official was at once accurate and impressive in his further statement that under federal operation of the railroads the safety first campaign resulted in a decrease in a single year of 1,231 employees killed and 28,692 injured.

The average American farmer produces nearly three times as much food as any other farmer in the world. Most people will be surprised to hear this, especially in Europe, says Boys' Life. We often read that farm land abroad produces three or four times as much per acre as in the United States, and the American farmer is often criticized for this state of affairs. It is true that an acre produces much more abroad, but that is because there are so many more men to work on it. Some 35 per cent of the population of the United States work on farms, and they not only feed themselves and the 65 per cent who live in cities, but most of the world besides.

John Burroughs has done many things for which his countrymen love him, but he never set a finer example than when, on his eighty-third birthday, he planted a tree. "If I knew I were to die tomorrow," said a philanthropist of some generations back, "I should plant a tree today." Burroughs has bettered that instruction; he has planted trees without waiting to hear his death sentence. He has linked himself with the future by a living and beneficent bond, which all can forge if they will. We cannot all become famous naturalists, but we can—and we should—plant trees.

The good old days of the rheumatic are gone, says Houston Post. He no longer totes a raw tater in his pocket. He goes to his doctor, his doctor sends him to the tonsil expert, the tonsil expert sends him to the X-ray expert, the X-ray expert sends him to the dentist, and the dentist returns him to the doctor, and the doctor sends him to the drug store. 25 Pennsylvanians Graduate From West Point.

Pennsylvania habitually leads in so many enterprises in which the entire nation is concerned, that the announcement that the Keystone State is first in any particular issue no longer occasions any great surprise.

A few weeks ago the District Recruiting Officer announced that this state led this year in the number of appointments for the West Point Military Academy and now comes the announcement from him that Pennsylvania also leads in the number of graduates from the same institution. Out of the 273 men graduating from the Army Academy this week, 25 hail from Pennsylvania. Second to this state comes the Empire state with 22 successful cadets.

5 of these Pennsylvanians whose names are given below, reside in the Harrisburg Recruiting District. Their names and addresses are:

William E. Crist, 2223 Penn. St., Harrisburg.
Harry T. Fisher, R. D. 1 Harrisburg.
Robert Edwards 215 N. 18th St., Allentown.
John I. Gregg, R. D. Lewistown

Cox, governor of Ohio and Edwards governor of New Jersey have been selected by Wall Street to run against Harding and Coolidge.

One stock exchange broker has offered to wager even money that the ticket would win against the Republican nominees.

BRIDE'S GOWN IMMODEST, PRIEST DECLINED TO OFFICIATE

A wedding ceremony in St. Louis cathedral was postponed several hours today because the officiating priest, Father Antoine of the Order of Oblate Fathers of Mary Immaculate, declared the bride was immodestly attired and violated a recent order of Archbishop Shaw if the diocese of New Orleans relative to wearing apparel. The name of the bride was not divulged.

Everything had been prepared for the wedding and the bridegroom was in the edifice. The altars were ablaze with candles and the electric lights in every part of the ancient cathedral were lighted. The bride started up the main aisle, but had not gone far before the priest viewed the gown; ordered the lights out and sent her home to assume other garments. The marriage ceremony was then performed.

Walking Snakes.

It is supposed that the early ancestors of modern snakes walked on four legs. Some big serpents, such as the boas, even now have rudimentary hindlegs. But the "feet" on which all snakes do their walking today are the cartilaginous extremities of their ribs. To preserve these is the greatest difficulty in the preparation of an ophidian skeleton.

POULTRY FACTS

GOOSE MEAT IS NUTRITIOUS

Fowls Will Be Found Profitable in Regions of Cheap Land and Abundant Pasturage.

If the goose of the fable was able to lay a golden egg there is no reason why her progeny of the present era cannot repeat this miracle in a more concrete form. Goose meat is nutritious and palatable and not greasy when properly cooked, and an extension of goose raising in the regions of cheap land where pasturage is abundant is a suggested source of cheaper meat.

Geese are raised chiefly in the South and middle West, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri and Arkansas being the chief supply sources. During the decade ending in 1910 the total number of geese declined 22 per cent, largely because of the lack of cheap pasture and the limited demand for goose feathers and goose flesh.

The Toulouse, Emden, Chinese and African are the most popular American breeds of geese, the first two greatly leading the others. Occasionally the eggs are used for cooking, but generally geese are kept only for meat and feather production. Practically all the geese in this country are raised in small flocks on general farms, some men making a specialty of collecting large numbers of geese and fattening them for a few weeks before they are killed. As grass makes up the bulk of feed for geese, it is doubtful whether it pays to raise them unless good grass range is available during the summer. A pool of water for bathing and recreational purposes is also a desirable feature.

The market for geese is not so general as for chickens. This point should be considered in undertaking the raising of geese. The demand and the price paid for geese are usually good in sections where goose fattening is conducted on a large scale.

Geese are hardy birds and need shelter only in the worst weather. An empty shed or an old barn usually is satisfactory for this purpose. From 4 to 25 geese may be kept on an acre of land, although under most conditions ten is a fair average. Wherever possible the geese should have free range during the grass season. Southern plantation owners keep geese to kill the weeds in the cotton fields.

The eggs may be hatched by either hens or geese. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their young. The period of incubation of goose eggs varies from 28 to 30 days.

Goslings do not need food until they are twenty-four to thirty-six hours old, when they should be fed one of the mashers recommended for chickens or goslings, or a mash or dough of two-thirds shorts (middlings) and one-third cornmeal, which can be made of equal parts shorts and cornmeal, with 5 per cent of beef scrap added after the goslings are six weeks old. Bread and milk make an excellent feed for young goslings. Fine grit or sharp sand should also be available in cold weather.

Most geese breeders do not confine their geese for fattening, but feed them freely a few weeks on a fattening ration before they are to be marketed. The geese may be confined for two or three weeks and fattened, but some green feed or vegetables should be added to the ration.

FEED SUPPLIED TO POULTRY

Several Different Substances That Go to Make Eggs Must Be Available in Hen's Ration.

The kind of feed supplied the hen is fully as important as the quantity. The egg is made up of several different substances and unless these are available in the ration eggs cannot be produced.

DISCARD ALL INACTIVE HENS

Old Fowls Are Better Working Members Than Those That Are Physically Weak.

When weeding out flocks a good place to begin is with the hens that are not thrifty and active. Old hens often are better working members of the feathered family than those that are physically weak all the time.

FARM ANIMALS

POINTERS FOR BEEF GROWERS

One Method of Bringing Down Prices of Meat Is Improvement in Type of Animals.

General improvement in the type and quality of beef animals the country over is one of the means urged by the United States Department of Agriculture for bringing down the high cost of meat to the consumer and, at the same time, increasing the profit of the producer. Some of the most essential items in growing beef on the farm, specialists of the department say, are:

Plenty of pasture and feed. The right kind of cows—those that will produce good calves regularly.

A good, pure bred registered bull—one that will sire good calves persistently.

A large calf crop. This means that all cows shall drop calves, and that the calves shall be properly cared for at birth.

Proper care of the breeding herd and the calves.

Selection of good heifer calves to replace old or inferior cows.

Prevention of disease among the breeding herd and the younger stock.

Shelter sufficient to protect the cattle from both severe cold and extremely hot weather.

A practical knowledge of fattening cattle for market.

Marketing to advantage.

HOGGING DOWN RYE UNWISE

Practice Is Unprofitable, According to Pork Production Tests at the Ohio Station.

Hogging down rye is an unprofitable practice, according to tests made in pork production at the Ohio experiment station. The tests show that it is generally more profitable to harvest the grain and sell it as a cash crop or to feed the grain to hogs after thrashing rather than to allow the hogs to harvest the grain themselves.

Specialists point out that the daily increase per pig when hogging down rye is generally less than half a pound and that the amount of grain required to produce 100 pounds of gain is much higher than where the grain is fed directly to the hogs. As a rule, about 611 pounds of rye, hogged down, were required to produce 100 pounds of gain, whereas hogs fed on corn with tankage and clover pasture required but 331 pounds of concentrates to produce the same amount of gain.

The unprofitableness of hogging down rye is attributed to the fact that hogs are either unable to secure rye in sufficient quantities or are inclined to eat only slightly more than is required for maintenance.

Young pigs cannot learn to eat too soon. They should be encouraged to eat when as young as three weeks of age.

"ARTIE"

By DORA MOLLAN

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Sarah Malthorpe married Arthur Allen she changed the style of "doing" her hair. Grandmother Malthorpe disapproved. "Sarah," she said in her precise, mild way, "your hair was very becoming parted in the middle as you have always worn it. Now that you have changed the parting so far to one side it gives you a very unbalanced appearance. And I have noticed in my long life," she added whimsically, "that exterior looks exert a pronounced influence on one's mental processes." To which Sarah answered one word: "Nonsense."

Two months later Grandma Malthorpe again spoke to her favorite grandchild on the same subject: "Sarah," she said gently, but decidedly, "you are giving too much time to your house and not enough to Arthur. Put your hair in the middle again, child. It will give you a more balanced set of values." Sarah shut her mouth tight on some words she would have spoken had this repeated advice come from anyone but her beloved granma.

It was directly after supper that night that Arthur proposed to his wife that she accompany him over to the Sykes house next door. "I hate to miss a day, dear. The poor fellow looks forward so much to my visits. It's no joke to be confined to one room so many months, you know, and I've made so many excuses to Mrs. Sykes on your account," he pleaded; "do come along this time."

"It's not necessary for you to make any at all," Sarah answered. "You know what I think of that woman—what every one around here thinks. She's altogether too free-and-easy in her manner and in her dress. Anyway, it's impossible for me to go now. I never leave my supper dishes, you know."

That this was a thinly veiled accusation of Mrs. Sykes' housekeeping methods Arthur knew. "Yes, I know you never leave anything you may want to do on my account?" With these words Sarah's husband slammed the kitchen door behind him.

For a moment Sarah felt stunned. It was the first time Arthur had ever spoken crossly to her. Then she thought even harsher things of her next-door neighbor, who had only recently moved into the village. A married woman who wore her hair bobbed and went on the street dressed as Mrs. Sykes did was capable of anything, Sarah decided. Could Grandma Malthorpe's words have carried a hidden meaning? Were they intended as a veiled warning? Was the invalid the only attraction next door? In spite of her queer dress, Mrs. Sykes was pretty. Here Sarah's thoughts were interrupted by the sharp ringing of the telephone bell.

It was an out-of-town call, Mr. Allen was wanted. Sarah ran out to the edge of her lawn and called. There was no answer. She went further—to the foot of the Sykes front steps—and was about to repeat her call from there. But she didn't. And this is why: Through the screen door came the soft contralto voice of Mrs. Sykes: "Oh, Artie, dear, you don't know how heavenly it is just to sit in your lap awhile and feel your comforting arms."

It was enough. Sarah paused to listen no longer. Even ignoring the receiver left off the hook, she ran straight down the street to Grandma Malthorpe. That wise old lady listened silently, stroking the one-sided part in her favorite grandchild's hair meanwhile.

"My dear," Grandma Malthorpe spoke in her usual gentle voice, "you stay right here. I will go and see what all this is about." Sarah didn't remonstrate, just buried her head a little deeper in the sofa cushion and waited. All her life she had gone to Grandma Malthorpe when in trouble, and she had never failed her yet.

It seemed hours since grandma came had tapped down the front wall but in reality only elapsed, when Sarah again heard the familiar sound. When the old lady entered the room her expression was noncommittal.

"Now, child," she said, "go upstairs and comb your hair over. Part it straight in the middle. Then I will have something to tell you." Wondering, but knowing well that when her grandmother used that tone she expected to be obeyed, Sarah went.

Grandma looked appraisingly at Sarah when the latter returned. "It's much more becoming that way, child. You must go over and call on the woman tomorrow, Sarah. She's a fascinating little thing, as unconventional as she looks."

"But, grandma!" Sarah broke in bewildered. "I heard her say it, I tell you. Where is Arthur?"

"Still up visiting with Mr. Sykes when I left, dear. He doesn't know anything about your coming down here."

"What—" but Sarah got no further.

"Don't interrupt your elders; it's bad manners," continued Grandma Malthorpe. "Mrs. Sykes has an amusing way of naming her furniture after the persons who gave it to her. They have only a tiny income, and she sold most of their household goods to pay Mr. Sykes' hospital bill. So when her physician advised her to take her husband to the country, their friends gave them enough things to start in on again. Now, tonight, just as you went over, she sat down, after a particularly hard day, in a big easy chair given by an old chum of Mr. Sykes, whom they affectionately call 'Artie.' She was talking to it, not to your Arthur."

Grandma Malthorpe laughed so infectiously that Sarah joined in against her will. "Now, run along home, child, and take a notional old woman's advice. Never judge a person before you know him. Be a chum to your husband—not merely his housekeeper. And part your hair in the middle, child; it's much more becoming."

TRADED GOATS FOR DIAMOND

South African Millionaire Tells of Good Bargain He Made in First Business Deal.

An amusing story is told in connection with the early days of Sir J. B. Robinson, the South African millionaire, who has been figuring prominently in the London law courts.

He was crossing the Vaal river in 1869, looking for diamonds. He asked the natives if they had seen any "pretty stones," and at last he found a man who had a diamond. It was a small stone, and the prospector offered $50 for it, but the man refused to sell it. He increased his offer to $60, but still the man refused.

"What will you take for it?" he was asked.

"Twenty goats," was the firm reply; "nothing less."

"I sent off to the nearest farm," says Sir J. B. Robinson in telling the story, "and bought twenty goats for $37.50, and so got possession of my first diamond."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Wonderful Love Story.

A great love story is the greatest story in the world. But was there ever such a story as that of Mme. Hanska and Balzac? Balzac and Mme. Hanska corresponded seventeen years before their lips met, before they married. The genius fell in love with her through her letters to him. She was the wife of a Polish nobleman and enormously rich. From her first note to him Balzac was in a frenzy of love. His letters to her are a literature. Balzac loved; madame was prudent. She had rank; he had debts and the divine fire. They met once in Switzerland in 1833. Husband Hanska died. Balzac charged upon St. Petersburg where Hanska was living. But for seven years madame fell back before the blaze of Balzac's love. At last she consented to marriage. Two months after marriage Balzac died. Madame outlived him thirty-two years.—Exchange.

Habit of Overeating.

The habit of overeating, at first a pleasant one, once formed, grows untill, like all habits, it is difficult to break. A word to the wise is enough. When you are building or repairing a house you do not pile up material, such as bricks, mortar, timber and slates, and attempt to build them in where they are wanted. The result would be chaos. That is what happens when body-building material is crowded unthinkingly into your "tenement of clay." To begin with, habitual overeating, instead of giving strength, lowers vitality by dumping down the flame of life, as a small fire in a grate is smothered by putting on an excess of fuel. It wears out the digestive system, producing dyspepsia and all its manifold train of painful and debilitating symptoms.

Phrasing of Blackbirds.

Before "the time of the singing of birds" is over—and the nightingale is beginning already to "jug-jug" rather than to launch Tennyson's "liquid note"—some musician ought to do fuller justice to the blackbird. He is the most intelligible of all birds—that is, he has intervals like those of our human music: his phrases may be, and have been put down on our five-lined music paper. There is a West Sussex blackbird who sang all last May the first five notes of "The Campbells are Coming," and he is at it again, in the same garden, this year.

Other blackbirds have composed prettier phrases, but all sound equally folly and sweet in their trilling.—London Chronicle.

CHAUTAUQUA ENTERTAINERS

NERVE AND ADVERTISING TRIUMPH IN THIS PLAY

"IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE."

THIS three-act comedy is about the son of a wealthy soap magnate. The father wishes to make a man of him, so he conspires with his secretary, a winsome young woman, to win the boy's affection and inspire him to a life worth while.

Scarcely knowing that there is another business in the world other than the manufacture of soap, Rodney Martin becomes imbued with the idea of developing into a soap magnate himself and beating the "trust," which happens to be his father. In launching his venture he is aided by his father's secretary and the press agent of a defunct musical show. They begin operations with a sensational advertising campaign. Every dollar they can raise, scrape, beg or borrow is invested in making the public believe that their "13 Soap" is "unlucky for dirt." When orders begin to roll in they suddenly awake to the fact that they have no soap. They pass through a series of adventures that are laughable in the extreme. The father becomes convinced that advertising pays, and when the final curtain drops Rodney finds himself rich, in the good graces of his father and married to the girl he loves.

The play is to be presented by a cast of nine characters, with complete stage settings and costumes, on Chautauqua's fifth night.

MYSTERIOUS "M" IS EXPLAINED BY
PLAY INTERPRETERMiss Buckley Corrects Impression
That There Is a Foreign Handle to Her Name.

"I HAVE always objected to the many mistakes that are made about the innocent letter 'M' with which I prefix my name," says Miss Buckley, who is to be heard in Booth Tarkington's "Mister Antonio," on Chautauqua's third afternoon. "Folks seem to think there is something mysterious about that letter. On more than one occasion I have stood in the wings, listening with mirth, while the official introducer said something like this: 'Ladies and gentlemen, it gives me pleasure to present Mademoiselle Beryl Buckley.'"

"Now, that 'M' stands for just plain 'Mary' and I am proud of it. I object to having that good old name construed into a foreign title.

"And just as I object to that error, do I object to having the name 'reader' applied to me. I have the greatest respect for a good reader, or anyone who chooses to be known by that professional title, but it does not fit where I am concerned. I am sure I will not pass as such with most people trained in the art of elocution.

"I break rules, and I 'glory' in my shame.

"I am not satisfied to merely 'suggest' a character, but so far as lies within my power I must be the character."

Miss Buckley considers "Mister Antonio," the play which she is to interpret here at Chautauqua, as the most human story Booth Tarkington has written. She maintains that every town has its characters which fit the characters of the play.

There is a "Mr. Jorjy," who can be good when in the bosom of his family and his church, but who can not withstand temptations of the outside world.

Sometimes there is the minister who forgets it is said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these," and there is the poor misjudged, misguided "Jane Ramsey," who needs a friend or two.

Every town needs its Good Samaritan, in the guise of a "Mister Antonio."

"If I can only make my people see these characters, and learn from them—if I can take 'Mister Antonio's' message of love and forgiveness, and his spirit of good cheer, into the hearts of men and women, then I know I have done a thing worth while," says Miss Buckley.

"I am not sure what name applies to the thing I strive to do, but when I think of 'interpreter of dramas' it means something, for I strive to interpret and seek out for my hearers the hidden treasures of an author."

And this of which Miss Buckley writes, she does. Her characters live, and they each tell a story. And their stories are the stories of common, every-day people's lives.

After all, isn't being "just natural" the truest thing in art?

GRANVILLE JONES.

SIX YEARS ago, autocracy sought to destroy democracy and, as a result, ten million graves were dug in a World War. Today anarchy and radicalism, like blind Samsons, are reaching for the pillars of civilization in an endeavor to pull down the whole temple of law and order in the world. America awakened just in time to save democracy from autocracy's devilish purpose. Will America awaken in time to save civilization from the hellish purpose of red radicalism? This is a question yet to be answered.

One of the objects of the "100 Per Cent American Club," of which Granville Jones is national organizer, is to promote the theory of "one country, one language and one flag." Mr. Jones is to be heard on Chautauqua's second night in a plea for "thinking, talking and acting Americanism." His subject is "The Creed of Democracy." He will awaken the community with his revelation regarding "organized revolution within our midst." He will show how the poison of anarchy is being injected into the body politic with its resultant eruptions in our social, industrial, commercial and political world. He insists that the hour has come when Americans should look these things squarely in the face.

IRENE STOLOFSKY.

APPEARING with Harold Procter, a tenor, on Chautauqua's third evening, Miss Stolfofsky will win the enthusiastic approval of patrons with her distinctive art as a violiniste. In recent seasons she has been one of the musical sensations of the Redpath list, as will be understood when she is heard in such numbers as Hubay's "Scenes de la Scarda" (Opus 12), Wieniawski's "Mazurka" and Saint Saens' "Swan." Her encore numbers further endear her to her hearers, for she chooses from such delightful numbers as "Annie Laurie," "Swanee River" and Sarasate's "Basque Imitation."

Following Miss Stolfofsky's appearance on the Ohio University series, Prof. T. N. Hoover reported: "The largest audience that ever attended a lyceum number here was unanimous in praising Miss Stolfofsky and her artists. She compares favorably with Maud Powell, who gave a recital in the same auditorium four nights later."

MERRY-MAKERS AT CHAUTAUQUA

"BILLY" Williams and Ada Roach are announced for the Joy Night program on Chautauqua's closing day. Their musical numbers and character sketches are of a class extraordinary. Another member of this happy company is Ruth Freeman, violiniste and dialect comedienne.

Certain-teed Roofing
Resists Fire

Certain-teed Roofing is fire retarding and spark proof; consequently your fire risk is greatly reduced when Certain-teed roofs your buildings.

Burning embers carried by the wind from nearby fires are always a menace to old fashioned, inflammable wood shingle roofs. Certain-teed forms a permanent protection against sparks and embers and all such carriers of fire.

Because of the great risk of general conflagrations in congested districts, and of the lack of safe fire protection in the outlying and rural districts you should get this Certain-teed protection on your buildings.

In addition to being fire resisting, Certain-teed is a most economical roof. It resists all forms of weather attack—rain, sleet, snow, sun, etc. It is guaranteed by the manufacturer for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to the weight you select.

There is a scarcity of many types of roofing products—you can always get Certain-teed Smooth Surfaced Roofing, the most economical and serviceable roofing to be obtained.

See your dealer at once. He either has Certain-teed or can get it quickly from a nearby Certain-teed warehouse.

Why I Picked the G-O Tractor

At the first inspection it impressed me as the most common sense design of all the tractors I looked over.

I operated it myself and saw how easy it is to handle even for a man of no experience. I changed to six different speeds, forward and reverse, and was never in danger of stripping gears, for there are no gears or clutch in the G-O Transmission.

With that I saw how thoroughly the farmer is protected against mechanical troubles. All its gears are enclosed and running in oil. And there are no gears or chains on the rear wheels.

Then I saw that the G-O is built for a farmer who is not a mechanic. It has fewer parts—and nothing complicated about it. Any man around the farm can do what little fixing there is to do, right in the field without delaying the work.

Nothing freakish or experimental. Four wheels, four cylinders, 14-28 H. P. on gasoline or kerosene.

I want you to come in and see these facts. The G-O itself shows them. That's why I picked it.

They prove its dependability to live up to its eight-year record, plowing ten acres a day, or operating any belt driven machine up to a 28-in. Separator, for farmers all over the country.

Come in and see it, or let me mail you a catalog.

Mysteries of Spirit World

PAUL W. WARD.

THE present popularity of discussions concerning Spiritualism indicates that one of the most entertaining talks of Chautauqua week will be that of Paul W. Ward, on the fourth afternoon. His theme is 'Mysteries of the Spirit World' and in this address he embodies the results of careful study of the subject from many angles.

Mr. Ward is a graduate of both Union Seminary and Columbia University, New York City. Until recently he was an instructor at the Air Service Flying School at San Diego, California. His conclusions of modern Spiritualism are based on his own and the scientific study of the subject. A scientific method will be used in the study of the medium and the psychology of the medium and in psychical research.

COMMITTEE OF FORTY EIGHT TO FORM PARTY

Asserting that the Republican national convention "favored most of the serious problems and mentioned others only to reveal its unwillingness to face them honestly," the committee of 48, in a statement signed by James P. Mitchell and other members, said that "whatever amendments existed as to whether there would be a new party candidate for president has been removed."

The committee will adopt a platform and nominate a candidate for president at a convention in Chicago on July 16. "The Republican party has been driven out of representation in the councils of the millions of voters in this country," the statement said. "The new party will represent these voters and will present a definite and constructive program."

PLAYING BUSINESS THE GAME

Life itself is aptly likened to a game. To win, to earn and enjoy the fruits of victory you must play fair.

A cup or medal or other trophy is not the real prize the victor receives. The real prize, the real reward, is the satisfaction derived from superior, worthy achievement.

Wealth is not the real prize of life. It is only a trophy, a symbol, and may carry with it no satisfaction; indeed it does not carry with it genuine, lasting satisfaction unless it has been won fairly, honestly, honorably. The more I see of rich men and the closer my insight into the workings of their minds and hearts, the more strongly convinced do I become that great wealth is no passport to happiness nor proof of true success.

It is an old truth but it needs preaching every sunrise, so many do not know it, or, knowing it, do not heed it. If they could only be made to understand, if they could only see things in their true colors, if they could only peer into the hearts of many millionaires, they would order their lives more rationally and enjoy life more thoroughly.

To win out you must play the game every time.

"Look at So-and-So: he has everything he wants, yet everybody knows that he made his money by shady practices," you may reply. Don't fool yourself that So-and-So has everything he wants. Do you imagine that he doesn't know how you and other people regard him? And do not think for a moment that he enjoys being looked at askance, or that he wouldn't exchange most of his ill-gotten gains to stand high with you and other people—and to stand high with himself.

There have been wholesale efforts to reap more than has been sown, to get more than has been earned, to tilt the scales unduly.

Sooner or later the profiteers and labor slackers will get their just reward.

The call is for the fellows who can be depended upon, under any and all circumstances, to play the game. The things that count are the things that last.

Playing the game lasts. The fellow who isn't fired with enthusiasm is apt to be fired.

Excess is an arch enemy of success. If top-notch effort yields you no happiness, there's something wrong either with you or your efforts. Sit down and do some analyzing.

After all, you've got to give full fair value. Or you won't last. Carelessness and failure at times.

The most valuable "system" is a good nervous system. Saving is having.

If you have half an hour to spare, don't spend it with someone who hasn't.

Don't simply see how you can "put in the day," see how much you can put into the day.

Never contrive to make it easy for your concern to get along without you. Make sure the prize you chase is worth the price. If you cultivate your talents you'll always find an opportunity to use them.

When in a fix, sweating will get you farther than swearing. Let muscles do the kicking.

Honking your horn doesn't help so much as steering wisely. Don't expect poor work now to lead to brilliant work hereafter.

You have no idea how big the other fellow's troubles are. It's all right to aspire to control others, but have you begun with Number One?

Notice that two-thirds of "Promotion" consists of "Motion". There is a better market for smiles than frowns.

The highest form of salesmanship is nothing but service. The only influence worth having is the influence you yourself create.

The wages of idleness is demotion. There is no higher rank than that of worker.

No title can ever make a loafer a nobleman. There must be output before there can be income.

Defeat is often a spur to victory. The best reward is sense of worthy achievement.

Good times for all can only be the product of good work by all.

POINT

On Saturday night June 5, several boys fishing along the creek put him or some poison in several deep holes where the water flows through the land of Albert Goon and on Sunday morning the creek was full of dead fish from one to twelve inches in length. Every fish in that part of the stream was killed. Several parties one can be found, prosecution will be made. It is thought that the same party dammed the place last year and will be watched in the future.

Mr. Robert Goon, wife and family and Zack Lambert, wife and family, of Johnstown, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Goon.

Agnew, Tyrone; Josiah Hissong, Point; R. C. Smith, Point; Henry Anderson, Johnstown; James P. Kegg, Johnstown; Samuel King, Clymer; Co. I, Jonathan S. Dawson, Carbondale; and W. S. Conrad, Huntingdon.

Several good addresses were made by different parties and a recitation on the Flag was given by Miss Kegg a blind daughter of James P. Kegg, of Johnstown. The evenings, and a good part of the day were taken up by a regular old fashioned Camp Fire where a timid comrade did not hesitate to give his experience. The next reunion will be held at the same place the date to be set by the officers of the Association. R. C. Smith was unanimously elected Chaplain to take the place of Joseph L. Leonard. The Department encampment held their convention at the same time and everyone in Indiana did their best in the line of entertaining. The meeting was pronounced the best ever.
